

Effective Pest Control

Sheltered warm buildings with sources of food and water, however small will be attractive to pests. Undetected pests can cause serious damage to building structures, stocks and ultimately the services you offer. Pest control of one form or another is an issue that most businesses should consider as part of their management responsibilities.

For rodent pest infestation there is a legal requirement for their eradication and control, whilst some insect infestations can cause stock damage and loose you staff who refuse to work in such conditions. In extreme cases it could mean closing your premises while the problem is tackled, costing you trade and reputation.

Effective pest control can only be guaranteed with regular inspections and control measures. Many businesses have contracted pest control as a preventative measure, especially those businesses in the catering or hotel industry or those with large premises.
